1. When the new students were registering in September 1951 for the 1951-1952 term, they were asked whether they wanted to render military service concurrently with their university studies. Those who refused were not admitted to the university.
2. Since then, all the new students wear uniforms and live in barracks. Every morning they participate in military drill. They are permitted to write to their families only once a week. During the summer vacation they must go to camps for military training. In Budapest alone there are about 3,500 students in uniform.
3. During 1952-1953, these regulations are to be extended to include third-year students.
